JP's dad decides the car needs a wash. But to JP, the car wash is scary, especially when it starts to look like a giant octopus! But JP soon realizes that the octopus is friendly and that he can be brave. With an innocent yet fun plotline, young readers will quickly learn how to cope with their own fears just like JP.

ANA CRESPO is originally from Brazil. Before becoming a children's book author, Ana worked as an academic advisor and as a translator. She holds a bachelor's degree in journalism and a master's in education. Ana lives in beautiful Colorado with her husband, two kids, and a variety of wildlife.

ERICA SIROTICH is a children's book illustrator. She also runs a shop that creates paper goods and prints for children's rooms and nurseries. She lives in San Francisco with her dog.

Madame Martine and Max visit the Louvre!

Madame Martine's friend Louis works at the Louvre Museum. When he suggests Madame Martine and her dog Max visit him and see the works of art, Madame Martine declines his invitation—she knows dogs are not allowed at the museum. But Max has a different plan! He sneaks into the Louvre and sends Madame Martine and Louis on a chase around some of the world's most beautiful works of art.

SARAH S. BRANNEN is the author and illustrator of Uncle Bobby's Wedding and Madame Martine. She has illustrated over a dozen books for children, including Feathers: Not Just for Flying, a Junior Library Guild selection. She lives in Massachusetts but goes to Paris as often as possible.

"Too bad," said Louis. He winked at Max. "Come with me. I know every inch of this place." They scurried through a hall of statues. "This, for instance, is a Lamassu statue, from Assyria..."

"Shhh!" said Madame Martine. "They'll hear you!"

GRACE MACCARONE is a children's book editor and the award-winning author of many books for children, including Miss Lina's Ballerinas, The Haunting of Grade Three, Monster Math, The Three Bears ABC, and the First Grade Friends series. She lives in New York.

PISTACCHIO is the union of two self-taught artists from Barcelona: Núria Aparicio and Joan I. Guardiet. Núria lives with her husband and two cuddly cats. She's knitting a beautiful pullover for the Wolf to make him happier. Joan is looking forward to adding this book to his library, allegedly to read it to his two daughters. His wife suspects he will secretly use it to learn to count to 100.

The well-known fable of the Three Little Pigs gets a makeover in this efficient counting guide for beginning readers. The first little pig uses 5 bundles of straw to build a house in the shape of a cylinder, but the wolf blows it down. Using 6 big sticks and sheets to build a cone-shaped house, the second little pig is also unsuccessful at keeping the wolf at bay. Finally, the third little pig gathers 100 strong bricks to build a cube-shaped house. Guess which piggy's house finally withstands the big bad wolf's blows? Pages at the end feature information on ordinal numbers, counting by ones and tens, and geometric shapes.

Can you hear the music?
Can you taste the calaveras?

It's Día de los Muertos (Day of the Dead) and children throughout the pueblo, or town, are getting ready to celebrate! They decorate with colored streamers, calaveras, or sugar skulls, and pan de muertos, or bread of the dead. There are altars draped in cloth and covered in marigolds and twinkling candles. Music fills the streets. Join the fun and festivities, learn about a different cultural tradition, and brush up on your Spanish vocabulary, as the town honors their dearly departed in a traditional, time-honored style.

LESLIE KIMMELMAN is the author of numerous books including The Three Bully Goats, Round the Turkey, and the Sam and Charlie (and Sam Too!) early reader series. Her books have received many awards, including several Sydney Taylor Notable Books. She lives with her family in New York.

JORGE MONLONGO is a Spanish artist based in Madrid. He illustrates children's books, writes and draws comic books, and paints canvas and walls. He has drawn a lot of crazy Hello Kitty adventures, a few Mameshiba books, a Mr. Peabody & Sherman mini-series, and a Cow and Chicken one shot.

The pirate chief has called a meeting.
“Ready for some trick or treating?
One rule only: Don’t. Be. Sweet.
Scowl and holler, TRICK ARRR TREAT!”

Charlotte Blue-Tongue, Peg-Leg Pete, Glass-Eyed Gabby, and their friends swashbuckle through the streets demanding loot from their neighbors in this Halloween pirate tale. As their world transforms from neighborhood to pirate’s lagoon, they shout, “We be pirates. TRICK ARRR TREAT!” But what’s that lurking in the shadows? Are the pirates brave enough to defend their treasure?

Grab the wagon, it's a bright autumn day and the trees are full of ripe, red apples! There's an apple festival underway at the farm and lots of work to do making cider. This visit finishes with a cider doughnut and a cup of freshly pressed cider. DELICIOUS! Told in crisp, action-driven rhymes from a young child's point of view, From Apple Trees to Cider, Please! is a realistic account of how apple cider is pressed, flavored with the charm and vigor of a harvest celebration.

Every apple does its part,
whether juicy sweet or tart.
Red, green, yellow: drop them in!
Turn the crank. The shredder spins.

What is that funny smell that has a sprouty sort of whiff?

While Santa and Mrs. Claus eat their dinner, Santa sneakily feeds his sprouts to one of the reindeer rather than eat them himself. The result is, uh, smelly, to say the least. Now, Rudy can't seem to stop releasing windy pops from his backside as he and the other reindeer help Santa deliver presents on Christmas Eve. The rest of the reindeer are downwind from Rudy and they are not handling the sprouty whiffs so well. They laugh so heartily at Rudy's rear-end trumpet that they simply cannot fly the sleigh as usual. It's up to Rudy's super-turbo gas to get them back home.

Anna Forlati

I thought it would be strange to practice yoga at the zoo, but that was before I realized so many yoga poses resemble the animals there!

A little boy begins taking yoga lessons at the zoo, where he learns that he can mimic the animals there with simple yoga poses. When he returns home after his lessons, he practices with his cat, Nino. With an illustration of each animal pose and a description of how to do it on each page, this enchanting book makes the perfect instruction guide for even the smallest yogi.

How can you cope with a parent's depression when you're only a kid?

A child recounts his experience of losing his father to depression in this poignant and beautifully illustrated picture book. The boy's father disappears into a world without color. As the father seeks help, color begins to reappear and with it hope. An ideal book for parents and caregivers to share with children to help them make sense of the devastating effects that depression can cause.

ANDREW FUSEK PETERS and POLLY PETERS are award-winning authors who have written extensively for children and young people of all ages. Initially recognized and critically acclaimed as poets, they have broadened their work to include plays, picture books, and fiction.

KARIN LITTLEWOOD studied graphic design at Northumbria University, followed by an MA at Manchester Metropolitan University, where she specialized in illustration. She has illustrated over forty children's books published worldwide.

GERTRUDE CHANDLER WARNER was born in 1890 in Putnam, Connecticut, where she taught school and wrote The Boxcar Children because she had often imagined how delightful it would be to live in a caboose or freight car. Encouraged by the book’s success, she went on to write eighteen more stories about the Alden Children.

Chuck and Dakota are back—
cowmic book adventure!

Chuck and Dakota win a chance to visit the studio of reclusive artist and storyteller Norman Redmane, the creator of IncrediBull, a cowmic book about a flying supercow from beyond the moon. But during the calves' visit, Norman gets bonked on the head... HARD. When he comes to, bad news: he thinks he IS IncrediBull. Worse news: he thinks Dakota is his superstrong sidekick, FantastiCalf.

MIKE LITWIN is a New York Times bestselling illustrator of the My Name Is Not Isabella series. He combines a variety of media to create scenes that serve the imagination and education of children. A graduate of the East Carolina University School of Art and Design, he plays both designer and illustrator with an often wacky, always delightful style. He currently lives in North Carolina with his wife and children.

Praise for Welcome to Bermooda:

"Litwin's tale (a setup for the prospective Welcome to Bermooda series) not only builds to a properly suspenseful, storm-wrecked climax, but is udderly loaded with bovine wordplay. Only a 'kau'pai' would fail to chortle, and that's no bull."—Booklist

Can Super Schnoz solve the secret of Strange before the evil Pierre du Voleur destroys it forever?

When Andy Whiffler—aka Super Schnoz—first smells Strange, the world's most famous, celebrated, and mysterious perfume of all time, he falls in love. Strange's recipe is a highly guarded secret, but all Andy has to do is take one whiff and he instantly recognizes every ingredient in the mixture—except one. Now, he's on a personal mission to figure out the last ingredient, but so is the evil, greedy owner of the Français Scent Company, Pierre du Voleur, who wants nothing more than to put Jean-Marie Le Puanteur and Strange out of business forever. After plenty of snooping and sniffing around, Andy finally figures out the secret ingredient that makes Strange so alluring. But when Andy slips up and accidentally reveals the secret ingredient to Pierre du Voleur, the race to save the secret of Strange begins!

Billie Simms doesn't want to be a watcher. She wants to be a Rider.

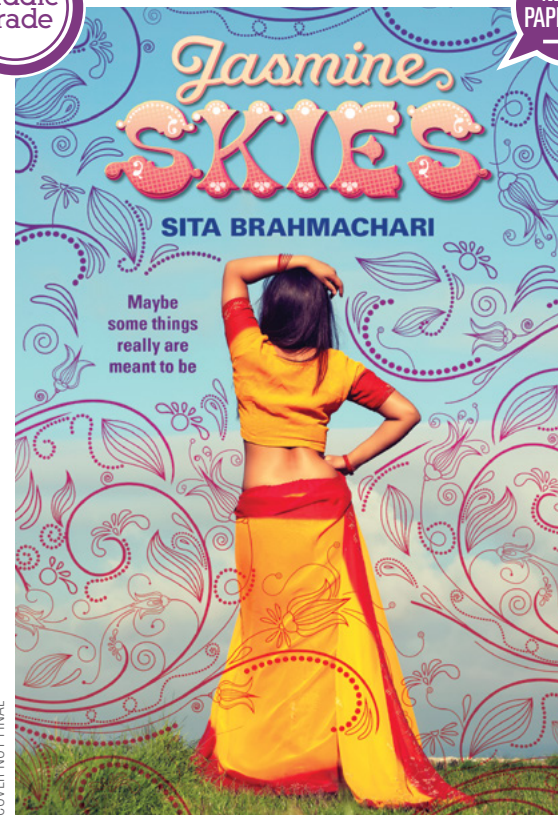

Thirteen-year-old Billie Simms doesn't think her hometown of Anniston, Alabama, should be segregated, but few of the town's residents share her opinion. As equality spreads across the country and the Civil Rights Movement gathers momentum, Billie can't help but feel stuck—and helpless—in a stubborn town too set in its ways to realize that the world is passing it by. So when Billie learns that the Freedom Riders, a group of peace activists riding interstate buses to protest segregation, will be traveling through Anniston on their way to Montgomery, she thinks that maybe change is finally coming and her quiet little town will shed itself of its antiquated views. But what starts as a series of angry grumbles soon turns to brutality as Anniston residents show just how deep their racism runs.

The Freedom Riders will resume their ride to Montgomery, and Billie is now faced with a choice: stand idly by in silence or take a stand for what she believes in. Through her own decisions and actions and a few unlikely friendships, Billie is about to come to grips with the deep-seated prejudice of those she once thought she knew, and with her own inherent racism that she didn't even know she had.

RONALD KIDD is the author of ten novels for young readers, including the highly acclaimed Monkey Town: The Summer of the Scopes Trial. His novels of adventure, comedy, and mystery have received the Children's Choice Award, an Edgar Award nomination, and honors from the American Library Association, the International Reading Association, the Library of Congress, and the New York Public Library. He is a two-time O'Neill playwright who lives in Nashville, Tennessee.

I thought freedom was just a word, but it's not. Freedom is hands and feet, bodies and faces, wounds and scars. It's a bell, and I rang it. It's a bus, and I climbed on.

For years, Arlie and her mom were on the run. Suddenly she has a chance to start over.

Arlie's face was disfigured by burns when her stepfather's meth lab exploded. After that, Arlie discovered the street smarts and survival skills she needed to shelter her addict mother, since the law and Lloyd, her deranged stepfather, are both looking for them. People died in the explosion and everyone wants answers.

But Arlie's carefully constructed world is ripped apart when her mother commits suicide shortly after her sixteenth birthday. Now she can no longer remain hidden. Social Services steps in, and before Arlie can make sense of anything, she is following the rules, going to school, and living in a 31-foot Airstream trailer with an eccentric uncle she didn't even know she had. Then she meets a boy who doesn't care about her scars or her past.

Just when she begins to think a normal life might be possible, Lloyd shows up. He's looking for the drug money he insists Arlie's mother stole. Will Arlie be able to shield her uncle and her boyfriend from Lloyd? Did Lloyd somehow play a role in her mother's death? And can she get rid of him once and for all before her world blows apart again?

MANDY MIKULENCAK has been a writer her entire working life. First, as a journalist then as an editor and PR specialist for two national nonprofits and a United Nations agency. Today she lives in the mountains of Southwest Colorado with her husband, Andy. She writes YA and adult fiction.

I'm positive Mom wanted me to find her body. I'd been taking care of us both for so many years that she trusted I'd know how to handle things. She'd say, "Arlie, if something ever happens to me, don't let the police or ambulance boys find me in a compromising position." Translation: Flush any remaining drugs down the toilet, make sure she had on clean clothes, and tidy up the motel room. By the time I had to carry out her wishes, I knew exactly what to do.

What she hadn't prepared me for was life without her. I wasn't afraid to be alone. Mom had a way of making me feel lonely even when she was right by my side. The scariest thing was that I was no longer invisible. Her death cast a spotlight on us both, and hiding wasn't an option.

I was numb when I dialed 9-1-1.

"I'd like to report a death," I said. "My mother's."

Two police cars arrived within minutes. The Animas View Motel could have been on their speed dial. Assaults and drug busts were frequent, deaths not so much.

Sticky, sleety rain cloaked the cruiser where they told me to sit and wait. Its heater, turned on high, was as suffocating as their questions.

"Are you all right?"

"Do you have any idea what happened to your mom?"

"Is there anyone we can call?"

No, no, and no, I could've answered, but I stayed mostly silent while two officers poked around the room and Mom's body. They'd left the motel-room door open, but I couldn't make out their movements from the squad car.

I'd already lied and told them I'd stayed at my best friend Mo's house last night and only found Mom early this morning. The truth was that I'd spent the entire night in a chair in the corner of the motel room, too exhausted to run and too afraid to ask for help, even from Mo. Her parents would have just judged me more than they already did.

But when I woke at dawn, a strange and unsettling thought picked at my brain: what if I just let someone else make the decisions now?

Barefoot, I step onto the cold toilet seat in the girls' bathroom and it doesn't even gross me out. I'd shoved my clunky sandals in my backpack an hour ago when this whole thing started. I knew I might have to hide. And if I had to hide, I couldn't make a sound. My life depended on it.

Somebody is coming.

I hold onto the side of the stall to brace myself, and try not to breathe. Well, try not to breathe loudly. Don't panic, I tell myself. It's probably just a drill. Maybe the resource officer is running around checking that all the teachers locked their doors according to protocol. Maybe Principal Bowen's voice will come back on the loudspeaker and tell us the lockdown has been lifted. That this was just a drill, and we all passed it with flying colors.

Even me. The idiot who picked the wrong time to pee. That's why I'm stuck in this bathroom instead of hiding under a desk like everyone else at Central High.

Just a drill, just a drill, just a drill, I promise myself. But drills last fifteen minutes max. They rush us through the protocol so that we can get back to the important business of solving quadratic equations and dissecting fetal pigs. It's been way more than fifteen minutes. I've been hiding in the girls' bathroom for over an hour.

I hear them again. Shushing footsteps against the concrete. Like someone's trying to sneak up on me. Since the whole world has been flipped to mute, the shushing seems loud. My heart beats in my ears. Pulsing, thudding, pumping...echoing through my body. We used to make fun of my sister Chloe for saying strange things like that when she was little. "My elbow's hungry," she'd say. "My nose is afraid." "My pinky toe wants a turn."

Only now the thoughts of Chloe grip me, and make the pulsing, thudding, pumping of my heart stop so suddenly that the blood pools in my veins. Because I know Chloe's stuck somewhere on campus right now too. Hiding.

If she's still alive.

A bomb threat shut down Central High for hours. Now, out of two thousand students, the bomber is still at large.

Gabriella Mallory, AP student and perfect-daughter-in-training, stands barefoot on a public toilet for three hours while her school is on lockdown. Someone has planted a bomb and she is hiding. The bomb is defused but the would-be-bomber is still at large.

And everyone at Central High School is a suspect.

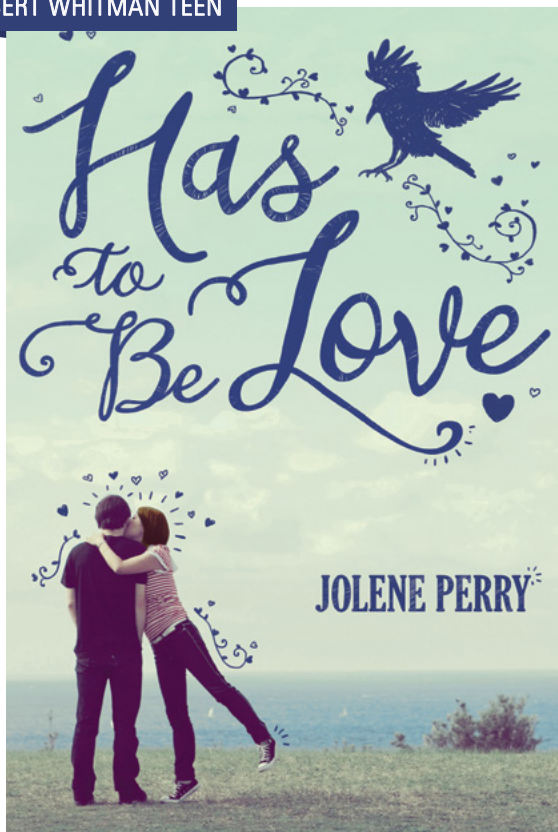

The school starts a top-secret crisis help line and Gabi is invited to join. When she does, she is drawn into a suspenseful game of cat and mouse with the bomber, who has unfinished business. He leaves threatening notes on campus. He makes threatening calls to the help line. And then he begins targeting Gabi directly. Is it because her father is the lead police detective on the case? Is the bomber one of her new friends? Could it be her new boyfriend with his complicated past?

As the story unfolds, Gabi knows she is somehow connected to the bomber. Even worse, she is part of his plan. Can Gabi reach out and stop him? Or will she be too late?

SARAH LYNN SCHEERGER is a writer and licensed clinical social worker who works with at-risk youth. She's the author of The Opposite of Love, which was selected for School Library Journal's "What's hot in YA" list. She lives with her husband and children in Ventura County, California.

JOLENE PERRY has a degree in political science and has taught middle school and high school. Her previous novels include Out of Play, The Summer I Found You, and Stronger Than You Know. She lives with her husband and family in Alaska.

In Clara's small Alaska hometown, people don't ask about her scars.

Years ago, Clara survived a vicious bear attack. She's used to getting sympathetic looks around town, but meeting strangers is a different story. Yet her dreams go far beyond Knik, Alaska, and now she's got a secret that's both thrilling and terrifying—an acceptance letter from Columbia University. But it turns out her scars aren't as fixable as she'd hoped, and when her boyfriend begins to press for a forever commitment, she has second thoughts about New York.

Then Rhodes, a student teacher in her English class, forces her to acknowledge her writing talent, and everything becomes even more confusing—especially with the feelings she's starting to have about him. Now all Clara wants to do is hide from the tough choices she has to make.

When her world comes crashing down around her, Clara has to confront her problems and find her way to a decision. Will she choose the life of her dreams or the life that someone she loves has chosen? Which choice is scarier?

Rhodes follows me up the trail at the edge of the forest to the wooden barn behind the house. I wipe my sweaty palms on my pants and try to take a deep breath. I'm seriously being ridiculous. Totally ridiculous. Like girls who swoon over boy bands ridiculous. He's an older guy that I just met. That's all.

"You're going to college, right?" He leans against the horse stalls.

"Why do you ask?"

"Everybody should get out of their comfort zone once in a while. And if you want to be a writer, like my aunt said, I don't think you'll get the teaching you need up here."

I want to be a writer.

But that want feels fragile—like if I talk about writing as a career too much or hope for it too much, that future will shatter before I have a chance for it to begin.

"I might go up to UAF for my freshman year," I say. University of Alaska is a massive compromise, but it's one I'm willing to make to stay close to home—at least until my scars are fixed. After that, the world might seem less like a cliff I've been asked to climb with no gear. That's when I'll maybe leave for New York, but not before. I'm still not sure how to manage the idea of leaving Elias behind for Columbia. I shove the thought away.

Rhodes's brow furrows. "You might want to think about somewhere else. See the world a little. I fully believe in current opportunity."

"What does that mean?" I ask.

"It means that life is too short to wait for things to come to you." He gives me a purposefully crooked smile, like he thinks he's cute or something. "Sometimes you have to reach out and try for what you want. Sometimes you don't know what you want until it's right in front of you. I had no idea I wanted to go to Alaska until my aunt suggested it, and now here I am, experiencing Alaska."

Rhodes's eyes are on me. People don't normally warm up to me like this. They always keep their distance for a while, watch me, and wait to feel comfortable before they talk. It's one of the things I love about Knik—everyone here knows me and the story of my scars. I get second glances, but not the stares I get when I'm somewhere new.

Sometimes escaping our past means we must face it head on.

After police intervention, fifteen-year old Joy has finally escaped the trailer where she once lived with her mother and survived years of confinement and abuse. Now living with her aunt, uncle, and cousins in a comfortable house, she's sure she'll never belong. Wracked by panic attacks, afraid to talk to anyone at her new school, Joy's got a whole list of reasons why she's crazy. Slowly Joy begins to find friends and grow closer to her new family. But just when hope takes hold, she learns she must testify in her mother's trial. Can she face her old life without losing her way in the new one?

PRAISE FOR STRONGER THAN YOU KNOW:

"Perry deftly avoids the problem-novel label thanks to complex characters and a well-structured plot. Joy's story is very affecting, and her voice is suitably self-effacing without being ostentatious...readers will be engrossed." —Kirkus Reviews

"While the subject matter is tough, this realistic title will draw teens in with its believable characters, including the well-written portrayal of the adult protagonists." —School Library Journal

"Perry's descriptions of Joy's intense turmoil are vivid...A moving survival story." —Booklist

"Perry manages to convey Joy's gradual growth without resorting to pamphlet-speak, but moreover she offers a portrait, rare in YA, of the way compassionate, functional families work and the good effects they can produce." —Bulletin of the Center for Children's Books, recommended

Will love bind them or tear them apart?

I don't trust you enough to love you. It's too dangerous.

Rose is the wild girl nobody really knows. Chase is haunted by his past. Both are self-proclaimed "disappointments," attracted to each other enough to let down their defenses. When Rose's strict, adoptive parents forbid the relationship, it only makes things more intense. But Chase can't hide from his own personal demons, and Rose has secrets of her own. After they're wrenched apart, a cryptic email arrives in the middle of the night on Christmas Eve, beginning a desperate pursuit and a look back over their tumultuous romance. Will they find each other before the night is over, or will they be torn apart forever?

PRAISE FOR THE OPPOSITE OF LOVE:

"The novel is for teens looking for a realistic story...Fans of John Green's Paper Towns will enjoy it." —School Library Journal

"Scheerger's novel is unusual in that all the characters—parents included—have immense flaws, but they are treated with understanding, patience, and even forgiveness...a thoughtful story of coming to grips with emotional pain." —Booklist

"The author, a licensed social worker who has worked with at-risk teens, creates a realistic and compelling story...The climax is predictable but satisfying and sensitively handled." —VOYA
