DIGITAL LOEB CLASSICAL LIBRARY

Founded by JAMES LOEB + 1911 + Edited by JEFFREY HENDERSON

www.loebclassics.com

“From Homer to St. Augustine, [the digital Loeb Classical Library] provides access...to the manifold glories of classical Greek and Latin.

For authority and completeness, nothing rivals it among the other online resources in the field...The Loeb Library...remains to this day the Anglophone world’s most readily accessible collection of classical masterpieces...Now, with their digitization, [the translations] have crossed yet another frontier.”

—TOM HOLLAND, WALL STREET JOURNAL

“Now is the crowning moment. The digitized Loeb Classical Library will enable anyone with a computer or proximity to a public, academic, or even secondary school library to have access to its entire scope of classical literature.”

—SUSAN KRISTOL, WEEKLY STANDARD

The mission of the Loeb Classical Library, founded by James Loeb in 1911, has always been to make Classical Greek and Latin literature accessible to the broadest range of readers. The digital Loeb Classical Library extends this mission into the twenty-first century. Harvard University Press is honored to renew James Loeb’s vision of accessibility and to present an interconnected, fully searchable, perpetually growing, virtual library of all that is important in Greek and Latin literature.

Corruption in America

From Benjamin Franklin’s Snuff Box to Citizens United

Zephyr Teachout

“In Corruption in America, an eloquent, revealing, and sometimes surprising historical inquiry, Teachout convincingly argues that corruption, broadly understood as placing private interests over the public good in public office, is at the root of what ails American democracy.”

—David Cole, New York Review of Books

Inventing the Individual

The Origins of Western Liberalism

Larry Siedentop

“Siedentop takes us on a 2,000-year journey that starts with the almost inconceivably remote city states of the ancient world and ends with the Renaissance...Siedentop’s aim has a breathtaking grandeur about it: to persuade us to ask ourselves who we are and where we are going by showing us where we have come from. A challenging epilogue suggests that the answers are not very flattering.”

The Tupac Amaru Rebellion

Charles F. Walker

★ A Financial Times Best Book of the Year, History

"A lucid and accessible survey in which Walker skillfully blends narrative with explanation to construct a harrowing story of violence and atrocities on an enormous scale...[It] will give Anglophone readers a perceptive and reliable account of the terrible events that occurred far away from what they naturally regard as the principal center of action at that time, the British North American colonies, a mere 322,000 square miles in size, as compared with an Andean surface area approaching two million."

The Royalist Revolution

Monarchy and the American Founding

Eric Nelson

"The Royalist Revolution is a thought-provoking book, and Nelson is to be commended for reviving discussion of the complex ideology of the American Revolution. He reminds us that there was a spectrum of opinion even among the most ardent patriots and a deep British influence on the political institutions of the new country."

A Tale of Two Plantations

Slave Life and Labor in Jamaica and Virginia

Richard S. Dunn

"A remarkable achievement. By tracking the enslaved populations on Jamaica’s Mesopotamia estate and Virginia’s Mount Airy plantation in minute detail, Dunn explores major themes in the history of slavery through the experiences of particular people and their social networks. His meticulous research, considered analysis, and unparalleled authority on the subject have set a new benchmark for histories of Anglo-American slavery."

Race Horse Men

How Slavery and Freedom Were Made at the Racetrack

Katherine C. Mooney

"Katherine Mooney’s enthralling account of an all-but-forgotten population of elite slaves in the American South reads like a novel. Race Horse Men is both the story of 19th century thoroughbred racing—‘America’s first mass-audience sport’—and a detailed portrait of the expert equestrian slaves and free black horsemen upon whose competence in the stables wealthy white ‘turfmen’ depended...Mooney makes a strong case for why these forgotten histories continue to illuminate systems of inequality to this day."

The Visitor

André Palmeiro and the Jesuits in Asia

Liam Matthew Brockey

“This story transcends Palmeiro’s life...Indeed, it is Palmeiro’s own letters and his lively accounts of his journeys, along with other sources, that Brockey puts to excellent use in his account of Jesuit enterprise in the Portuguese Empire in maritime Asia...In crafting Palmeiro’s life story Brockey brilliantly accomplishes his goal of shedding light on different historical contexts as well as the problems and questions of the early modern world...This well-written and enjoyable book illustrates how Palmeiro’s final days until his death marked the end of a generation of Jesuits whose dreams materialized in the expansion of Christianity in Asia.”

Nation Builder

John Quincy Adams and the Grand Strategy of the Republic

Charles N. Edel

"An intellectual biography...Few presidents merit such treatment as much as Adams, who, through essays, speeches, letters and a diary kept meticulously over almost 70 years, left a remarkable record of a great mind at work on the prospects of the young, fragile nation...He was, as Edel demonstrates, a farseeing man. Inferno

An Anatomy of American Punishment

Robert A. Ferguson

“This book forces prison officials and lawmakers to look inward and see within themselves the dark, unremitting reasons why things have gotten as bad as they have inside our prisons and jails. It says squarely to these political and legal and community leaders (and by extension to their constituents): in seeking to bring retributive justice to bear, in seeking to diminish the prisoner, you have also diminished yourself in ways you are unable or unwilling to admit. Even today, with the whiff of reform in the air, this is a brave and honest message.”

The Temptation of Despair

Tales of the 1940s

Werner Sollors

"[A] deeply powerful book...A work of scholarship that intersperses critical analysis of movies, photographs, and memoirs of the period with Sollors's own personal memories of being a frightened child, fleeing Silesia with his mother through a bombed-out and chaotic Germany in 1945...The Temptation of Despair paints a picture of a society in ruins and a people at the edge of psychic collapse. “Goodwin employs the writings of the once-famous newspaper columnist Walter Lippmann to describe the fervid U.S. debates that began with the 1929 stock-market crash. The device works beautifully. Lippmann, who wrote from 1931 to 1967, was so prolific, and his correspondence with other thinkers and decision makers was so cogent and extensive, that his oeuvre provides excellent material for examining a crucial moment in American history...[An] insightful chronicle.”

Transnational Currents in a Shrinking World

1870–1945

Emily S. Rosenberg

Transnational Currents in a Shrinking World examines the wide variety of social and cultural networks that emerged from the global exchanges of the late-nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Emily Rosenberg shows how transnational connections were being formed many decades before “globalization” became a commonplace term in economic and political discourse.

Empires and the Reach of the Global 1870–1945

Tony Ballantyne • Antoinette Burton

Empires and the Reach of the Global brings the history of empires into sharp focus by showing how imperialism has been a shaping force not just in international politics but in the economies and cultures of today's world. Focusing on both the strengths and limits of imperial power, Tony Ballantyne and Antoinette Burton describe the creation and disintegration of the reigning world order in the period from 1870 to 1945.

Global Markets Transformed

1870–1945

Steven C. Topik • Allen Wells

Offering a fresh look at trade during the second industrial revolution, Global Markets Transformed describes a world of commodities on the move—wheat and rice, coffee and tobacco, oil and rubber, all jostling around the planet through a matrix of producers, processors, transporters, and buyers. Steven C. Topik and Allen Wells discuss how innovations in industrial and agricultural production, transportation, commerce, and finance transformed the world economy from 1870 to 1945.

Migrations and Belongings

1870–1945

Dirk Hoerder

Toward the end of the nineteenth century, new railroads, ports, and steamships enabled people to travel faster and in greater numbers than ever before. Migrations and Belongings traces burgeoning population movements across several continents from 1870 to the end of World War II. This study explains the complex variables involved in global migrations and the processes of acculturation by which “belonging” takes shape.

Mapping the End of Empire

American and British Strategic Visions in the Postwar World

Aiyaz Husain

"[Husain] presents a convincing case in arguing that Britain, exhausted and virtually bankrupted by World War II, was more than happy to try to exchange its actual empire for an 'informal empire' based on the British Commonwealth—if only it could persuade the richer, fresher, more ambitious United States to take up new global responsibilities...Mapping the End of Empire shows us how anarchy was—with some horrific exceptions, such as in the Punjab and Northwest Frontier of India in 1947–48—generally avoided the last time around."

The Americanization of Narcissism

Elizabeth Lunbeck

“[A] prodigiously researched reconstruction of the story of narcissism...Lunbeck is exceptionally good at disentangling these often arcane psychoanalytic arguments and their reverberations in postwar social theory; she’s also very good on the intersections of saving, spending, and desiring in both psychoanalysis and consumer culture. What [Christopher] Lasch got wrong, she says, was imagining that [psychoanalyst Heinz] Kohut, who invariably sided with gratification over renunciation, was a compatriot; he was anything but. The consequence, she thinks, has been the popularization of the malignant narcissist and the overall neglect of the positive aspects of narcissism in our current conceptions.”

"Persuasively fills a major gap in both the study of American interventions in the developing world and the history of the Cold War. Between Pagan and Christian

Christopher P. Jones

"Standard accounts of the meteoric rise of Christianity after Constantine's conversion in 312 are familiar. Belief in Jesus Christ became the established state religion and a requirement for holders of public office in the Roman Empire. Pagan practices like idol worship and animal sacrifice were outlawed. Christian orthodoxy had no serious spiritual or political competitors. Distilling a life's scholarship, Christopher Jones unveils a more complex reality in Between Pagan and Christian... Jones powerfully establishes his main argument: that paganism, in a multiplicity of forms, persisted and was tolerated much later than the reign of Constantine."

Edited and Translated by

Akbar-nāma, or The History of Akbar, by Abu'l-Fazl (d. 1602), is one of the most important works of Indo-Persian history and a touchstone of prose artistry. Marking a high point in a long, rich tradition of Persian historical writing, it served as a model for historians throughout the Persianate world. The work is at once a biography of the Mughal emperor Akbar (r. 1556–1605) that includes descriptions of his political and martial feats and cultural achievements, and a chronicle of sixteenth-century India.

Laonikos Chalkokondyles

Translated by Anthony Kaldellis

Among Greek histories of the fall of Constantinople in 1453, the work of Laonikos (ca. 1430–ca. 1465) has by far the broadest scope. In the 1450s, Laonikos set out to write the history of his times, a version in which the armies of Asia would prevail over the Greeks in Europe.

A New Herodotos

Laonikos Chalkokondyles on the Ottoman Empire, the Fall of Byzantium, and the Emergence of the West

Anthony Kaldellis

This companion to the two-volume Dumbarton Oaks Medieval Library edition and translation of The Histories by Laonikos Chalkokondyles is the first book-length investigation of an author who has been poorly studied. Providing biographical and intellectual context for Laonikos, Anthony Kaldellis shows how the author synthesized his classical models to fashion his own distinctive voice and persona as a historian.

The Taktika of Leo VI

Revised Edition

Leo VI

Edited and Translated by George T. Dennis

Although he probably never set foot on a battlefield, the Byzantine emperor Leo VI (886–912) had a lively interest in military matters. Successor to Caesar Augustus, Constantine, and Justinian, he was expected to be victorious in war and to subject barbarian peoples to Rome, so he set out to acquire a solid knowledge of military equipment and practice. The Tactical Constitutions, or Taktika, were the result.

*A Critical Commentary on
The Taktika of Leo VI*

John Haldon

The Taktika, ascribed to the hand of the Byzantine emperor Leo VI “the Wise” (886–912), is perhaps one of the best-known middle Byzantine texts of an official or semi-official genre. John Haldon offers the first critical commentary to appear in any language, addressing in detail the many varied subjects touched on in the treatise itself and accompanied by three introductory chapters that examine the context, sources, language, structure, and content of the text, as well as the military administration of the empire in Leo’s time.

Between Thucydides and Polybius

The Golden Age of Greek Historiography

Edited by

Giovanni Parmeggiani

Historians like Ephorus, Theopompus, or Aristotle's great-nephew Callisthenes, to say nothing of Xenophon, counted among the most acclaimed in antiquity. But with the exception of Xenophon, their complete works have not survived, and thus they are accessible to the modern reader only in the form of fragments, usually quoted by later authors. Between Thucydides and Polybius sheds light on the interface between historiography and rhetoric, while undermining the claim that historians after Thucydides allowed rhetoric to prevail over research in their reconstructions of the past.

Facing the Monarch

Modes of Advice in the Early Chinese Court

Edited by Garret P. S. Olberding

Focused on the era between the Spring and Autumn period and the later Han dynasty, this volume examines the dynamic between early Chinese ministers and monarchs at a time when ministers employed manifold innovative rhetorical tactics. What emerges are original and illuminating perspectives on how the early Chinese political circumstance shaped and phrased—and prohibited—modes of expression.

A Sense of Place

The Political Landscape in Late Medieval Japan

David Spafford

A Sense of Place examines the vast Kantō region as a locus of cultural identity and an object of familial attachment during the political and military turmoil of the late fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries in Japan. Through analysis of memoirs, letters, chronicles, poetry, travelogues, lawsuits, land registers, and archeological reports, David Spafford explores the relationships of the eastern elites to the space they inhabited.

Rise of a Japanese Chinatown

Yokohama, 1894–1972

Eric C. Han

Rise of a Japanese Chinatown is the first English-language monograph on the history of a Chinese immigrant community in Japan. It focuses on the transformations of that population in the Japanese port city of Yokohama from the Sino-Japanese War of 1894–1895 to the normalization of Sino-Japanese ties in 1972 and beyond. Eric C. Han narrates the paradoxical story of how, during periods of war and peace, Chinese immigrants found an enduring place within a monoethnic state.

INTRODUCING THE DIGITAL

Dictionary of American Regional English

Joan Houston Hall, Chief Editor

www.daredictionary.com

The Dictionary of American Regional English (DARE)—representing the full panoply of American regional vocabulary, from Adam’s housecat to Zydeco—has long been consulted by a wide range of scholars and lovers of language and regional nuance. This digital version transforms the dictionary into an interactive, multimedia tool that will greatly benefit both scholarly inquiry and general intellectual curiosity.
